

Andy Dunn
Facilitator/Coach

Andy is a firm believer that we are all capable of doing more than we already do but that working harder isn't always the answer. If we are going to make an impact in business, for society and for the world, it's our behaviours that change everything.

Andy is a leadership facilitator and creativity coach with over 10 years' experience helping leaders, innovators and companies to excel. His work helps people to re-imagine working approaches, become more adaptable to change and navigate solutions to professional and personal challenges.

Working with international brands such as Adidas, Santander, Ricoh and London Business School, Andy is committed to helping the most ambitious brands invest in the people and creative, innovative ideas that make the difference to company success. Through a combination of management training, leadership strategy sessions and design thinking workshops, he enables and inspires people to think differently and do things differently with an action-focused approach.

Andy is also an Author and the Founder of Creators Club, an organisation supporting creative entrepreneurs and independent creators to realise their potential. Their work harnesses the unique power of collaboration through interactive and creative business events throughout the UK. He brings this vast experience in designing workshops, leading events and training facilitators to catalyse creativity in corporate environments.

With a background in design, coupled with a deep appreciation for our mind/body/spirit connection, Andy brings an uplifting and creative approach to the spaces he works. He uses techniques from coaching, NLP, theatrical training, design thinking and mindfulness, to help people create new ways of thinking, being and acting.

In his personal life he aspires to design and build a cool eco home, keep writing more books and get better at swing dancing.

Andy's guiding philosophy: "create the space, guide the process, nurture the potential."
